"The Chief John D. Coyle – New England Association of Chiefs of Police Fellowship at Roger Williams University is the culmination of hard work by a number of people and solidifies the partnership between the Association and the University to provide the best available training to New England's police officers and executives. The endowed fellowship will enable the faculty to stay current with the latest criminal justice research and training methods benefiting not only the police who receive the training, but the citizens who are served by law enforcement professionals."

Chief Lee Graham
South Burlington, Vermont Police Department and Past President of the New England Chiefs of Police

"The impressive alliance between the NEACOP and Roger Williams University - Justice System Training & Research Institute bolsters the relevant, leading-edge programs to the entire region's law enforcement community."

Chief Joseph Carter
MBTA Police Department, Boston, Massachusetts

"Roger Williams provides an outstanding education tiered to each level of police management so that a chief can provide his entire command staff solid foundation in best practices and emerging police issues."

The New England Association of Chiefs of Police – Roger Williams University Partnership

The Association teamed up with the Justice System Training and Research Institute at Roger Williams University's School of Justice Studies in 2003 to strengthen the region's law enforcement management and leadership. The Institute combines modern research and state-of-the-art technology to develop training programs that are the best, most advanced in the country.

Establishment of the John D. Coyle New England Association of Chiefs of Police Fellowship

In order to ensure that the high quality professional training begun with the partnership will endure, the NEACOP calls on all members and friends of the Association to help endow a fellowship which will:

- Provide for a distinguished policing professional with academic credentials to teach at the Institute
- Analyze and assess the effectiveness of existing policies and programs
- Promote a positive image of law enforcement
- Inform the Institute and NEACOP members on current trends in law enforcement.

Chief John D. Coyle

Chief John D. Coyle, the Executive Director of the New England Association of Chiefs of Police, retired as North Attleboro's Police Chief in 1999 after serving as a police officer for almost 50 years. He served 28 of those years as police chief.

This fellowship will be established in honor of Chief Coyle's long years of distinguished service and will support the delivery of relevant, contemporary police training.

A Commitment to Training – Leave Your Mark

Your financial support for the Chief John D. Coyle New England Association of Chiefs of Police Fellowship will help ensure that successive generations of police commanders are as professional and well-prepared as your current leadership. With your tax deductible donation toward this unprecedented endowment, you can have a lasting and profound impact on the quality of New England's law enforcement system. Earlier this year, the association presented the Roger Williams Justice System Training and Research Institute a gift of $25,000 to start the campaign, but we need your support too. To create this endowment, the Institute and Association will need to raise $500,000 over the next five years. With your support of a completely tax deductible donation we can succeed in this important endeavor.
